Transforming and Adapting: the inner and outer work of leading

This workshop offers us the opportunity to explore the inner work that enables us to lead well. We explore who we are choosing to be as leaders for these times. It will help us to understand how we transform ourselves and our organisations and create our own futures in the midst of uncertainty and complexity. It is a vital conversation for leadership teams to be having about how to rise to adaptive challenges and transform their organisations.

Robbie has almost 20 years of experience designing and delivering innovative, transformational leadership and talent development programs for a diverse range of organisations and sectors. His passion is helping individuals and organisations develop the capacity to solve their own problems and overcome the complex challenges they face, using their ingenuity, skill and innovation.

Robbie MacPherson

For over 15 years Robbie Macpherson has been designing and delivering innovative, transformational leadership and talent development programs for a diverse range of organisations, sectors and environments. His passion is helping individuals and organisations develop the capacity to solve their own problems and overcome the complex challenges they face, using their ingenuity, skill and innovation. The key to this is the ability to learn and adapt in real time, which requires openness, curiosity, experimentation, and resilience. He believes directly experiencing challenging and uncertain environments fosters new thinking and engagement.

For over a decade Robbie was an Executive for Australia's oldest NGO, the Benevolent Society, where he was Director of Australia's leading NGO social leadership consultancy, Social Leadership Australia.

Robbie is an Associate of the Australian Institute of Police Management (AIPM) and is lead facilitator of their ground-breaking Police Leadership Strategy (PLS), developing Police Commissioners across Australia and NZ. He also works regularly with senior global counter-terrorist agents both in Australia and overseas on the Leadership in Counter Terrorism Program (LiNCT); and has delivered programs for emerging Indigenous leaders; young Muslim leaders, and community leaders in various cultural communities; and works with numerous government departments and agencies in NSW, QLD, Victoria and NT. He is on the teaching faculty of the Australian Adaptive Leadership Initiative (AALI), which runs Masterclasses for practitioners of the Adaptive Leadership model across Australia.
